Heaven and Hell are where people go when they die, but Muzz is the place where dreams go to die. Foo Swee Chin takes a young girl to the world of Muzz, where she has to remember who and what she is among the fantastic scenery and creatures that live there. (Apr)

Collecting the entire series, Vaistron Volume One also contains an original 12-page story. (Apr)

Ambrosia Publishing

A young girl discovers a horrible secret about her home town: as soon as anyone turns eighteen, their souls are given to a cyclopean monster to maintain its immortality. Part Logan's Run and part Lovecraftean horror, They Do Not Die! presents a new nightmare for the comics world. (Apr)

Ape Entertainment

Going from just one person able to fly to the entire world being able is a big leap, but Bizarre New World: Population Explosion takes it. In this follow-up one-shot, Paul Krutcher, the first person with the power to fly, has to cross the country to find his son while avoiding the mass population now filling the skies. (Apr)

Arcana Studio

The relationship between man and machine is strained to the point of open conflict, and the only one that can repair the rift and save the world doesn't even know about it. Burn is a six-issue series by Camilla d'Errico & Scott Sanders that pits man against machine with all life hanging in the balance. (May)

Well, this may win the award for the most...original...concept of the year. Helen Killer is a four-issue series where science restores the sight and vision of Helen Keller, and at the same time gives her super powers. (Apr-May)

A young sasquatch gets lost in the Canadian wilderness, and now he has to use all his abilities to find his way home. Wendigo is an all-ages limited series by Sean O'Reilly & Pedro Del Gado that shows even mythological creatures have to face things that scare them. (Apr)

Archaia Studios Press

The six-issue Cursed Pirate Girl series deals with familiar everyday problems like following in your father's footsteps, inheriting his ship, sailing through something called the Obscurum per Obscurious to find previously mentioned father—you know, that sort of thing. Jeremy Bastion is the creative force behind this monsters-and-pirates series. (Apr-May)

Revenge is a dish best served cold, or failing that by someone who is stone cold dead. The Grave Doug Freshley is a mix of old west vengeance and fatal head wounds told in five bi-monthly parts. (Apr)

Beginning the new chapter in the saga, Okko: Cycle of Earth continues the tale begun in Okko: Cycle of Water, as Okko and his friends seek out the Forbidden Libraries of the Eighth Monastery of the Roof of the World. (Apr-May)

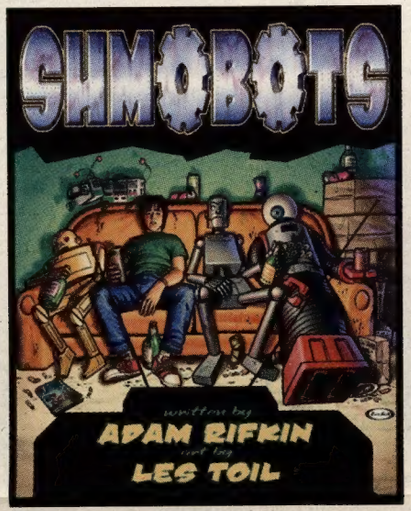
Bodog

Several people working under the Bodog label, including Bif Naked, Jason Darr, Tara LaRosa and several others, all are a part of a secret organization led by company founder Calvin Ayre—or so the concept of Ayre Force Volume One would have you believe. In their kickoff adventure, this covert action squad faces off against an evil corporation known as Wintercorp. (May)

Boom! Studios

Taking fantasy football to an all-new meeting, Blood Bowl is the latest collaboration between Games Workshop and Boom! Blood Bowl: Killer Contract is a five-issue series by Matt Forbeck & Lads Helloven that focuses on a "retired" player and his one last chance at glory. (Apr-May)



Building robots to benefit mankind never made less sense than in the pages of Schmobots. Oh sure, this new graphic novel by Adam Rifkin & Les Toil features robots—but all this machines want to do is sit around and watch TV all day. (Apr)

Everyone knows that the most dangerous person in a slasher film isn't the big bad killer with a machete, but rather the teenage girl who is eventually going to figure out a way to kill the monster. Daily Show writer Brendan Hay makes his horror comic debut alongside artist Nate Wilson with Scream Queen, a five-issue limited series that pits a shambling man-monster against Molly, the beauty queen of Rumson High. (May)

Back as an ongoing monthly series, the new Zombie Tales comic kicks off with stories by Joe R. Lansdale, Steve Niles, and Kim Krizan, and Boom! promises the same level of talent for every issue. (Apr-May)

Broadsword Comics

Reaching the milestone issue, Tarot: Witch of the Black Rose #50 is designed as a jumping on point for new readers, and begins a new storyline and introduces a new villain to boot. Series creator Jim Balent continues this mature reader action adventure series with a magical edge and begins the second half of his march towards issue #100. (May)

Buenaventura Press

With parody in full force, Johnny Ryan takes a stab at classic literature with Klassic Komics Klub. Masterpieces are desecrated with great love and turned into the ludicrous humor pieces that are possibly just as entertaining—and in some cases, probably more so. (Apr)

Dynamite Entertainment

The title says it all. Army of Darkness/Xena: Why Not? brings together two unlikely franchises. And when you have the meeting of two franchises that both feature the same actor—namely, Bruce Campbell—it is inevitable that the two will meet, isn't it? (Apr-May)

Based on the video game, Brothers in Arms brings the game's writer, Mike Neuman, together with David Wohl & Davide Fabbri to create stories set at Utah Beach with the 4th Infantry Division. (Apr-May)

Top Cow and Dynamite clash as their own dark characters meet in the most violent way. The daughter of Dracula pits herself against the mobster with the powers of demons at his disposal in Darkness vs. Eva. Both of these characters use their dark powers to fight against something even darker, but when they see each other as an evil worth stopping, who will come out on top? John Reppion, Leah Moore & Edgar Salazar combine talents to produce this special four-issue limited series. (Mar-May)

Based on the character from the classic films by Sergio Leone, The Man With No Name: The Good, The Bad, and the Uglier continues Dynamite's western comics with a new twist. Writer Christos Gage teams with artist Wellington Diaz pick up where the trilogy of films left off, bringing the anti-hero back for a new generation of fans. (May)

Dabel Brothers Productions

Adapting the novel, Dean Koontz's Frankenstein: Prodigal Son Chuck Dixon & Brett Booth present a contemporary tale of terror. The city of New Orleans has had a rash of murders lately, and he's taking parts from his victims—almost as though he was planning on building a new body. That probably isn't a good thing. (May)

George R.R. Martin's Wild Cards is one of the most successful super-hero inspired series of novels of the past century, and now they return in an all-new comic series, George R.R. Martin's Wild Cards: The Hard Call. Daniel Abraham & Eric Battle present the story of three teenagers inflicted with the Wild Card virus. Two of them get amazing powers, while the third gets The Joker, the wild power that mutates the victim horribly. How will they react: as heroes or villains? (Apr-May)

An original story written by the creator of the novels, Jim Butcher's The Dresden Files brings the wizard into conflict against an ancient creature that is trying to become something horrible. Well, more horrible than it already is, actually. (Apr-May)

Dark Horse

In a time when superheroes were moving into Silver Age prominence, Jim Warren made comics history by bucking the trend and taking comics back to the field's EC glory days in a pair of horror magazines: Creepy and Eerie. This spring, Dark Horse launches a line of deluxe hardcovers reprinting those classic magazines, beginning with Creepy Archives Volume One, a 232-page hardcover collecting the first five issues of Warren's flagship title, presented in the magazine's original size. (Apr)
